What changes did you implement this year as a result of last year's assessment process and what was the impact of those changes in your program?

As COVID continues to surge all over the country the counseling program has had to make adjustments to support student safety in the learning process. To that end, mitigating the ebb and flow of student enrollment due to the uncertainty of on ground class and their availability, faculty and staff have had to be creative in course presentation which has impacted the program and the assessment process. Namely, the students that had plans to attend class on ground were asked to attend online which created a learning curve that some were not amenable to but persisted none the less. Moreover, several classes presented in a combined format to meet student needs. For example, faculty taught students on ground and via zoom simultaneously on several occasions throughout the South Carolina campuses. In fact, the frequency and scheduling were modified, flipped classrooms were implemented to increase participation, and revision of course assignments were undertaking in support of the diverse learners. In addition, regarding field experience courses specifically processes or protocols were updated to support tele-mental health training for students and field experience sites that provide web-based services.

2. How will you ensure all faculty who teach in your program have received and are knowledgeable about the contents of this report?

The assessment report is shared in one drive with all faculty and the key performance indicators are shared during an annual faculty meeting in the spring of each year.

3. How would you describe where your program is in your assessment development: Beginning, Developing, Functioning, or Revising? Why?

The program is currently in the functioning phase of the assessment process. There are smaller areas of improvement that will soon be in revision because of the upcoming CACREP self-study due in part to the combining of programs across campuses for a cohesive presentation on paper to mimic the current presence of faculty, staff, and student interactions in the counseling program.
